UACP employee honored with quality award

Bruce Rowe, UA Corporate Programs (UACP) contract manager, was recently honored with the Alaska Section of the American Society of Quality (ASQ) "Individual Quality Award."

ASQ's Alaska Section presents this and other awards annually to organizations and individuals who demonstrate outstanding contributions in the field of quality.

In 2003, UACP and ASQ Alaska Section partnered to put on the Disney's Institute's "Disney Keys to Excellence" training seminar in Anchorage. The seminar shared Disney success strategies in leadership, value chain management and management with more than 200 attendees.

"It is evident that the success of the Disney Keys to Excellence seminar are the result of a positive, professional team culture fostered by Bruce ,," said Richard Mitchells, ASQ Alaska Section chair.

The event is another example of how UACP builds partnerships to provide educational and training opportunities for Alaska businesses.

"ASQ had the need to bring a quality seminar to Anchorage, for their own group and others to attend. The University was interested in bringing the same type of major event to the community, for employers to send their employees. So we said, this seems like a good partnership," said Rowe, who has worked at UA since 1990, and at UACP since its inception in 1999.
