

Constance C. Katasse

Degrees:

She earned a Ph.D. in Applied Linguistics (emphasis in adult language acquisition and translation theory) from The Union Institute, and has studied in Cuba, Greece, Mainland China, and the Russian Far East.

Previous Experience:

Constance C. Katasse retired as Professor of English in 2001, after almost 30 years of teaching undergraduate and graduate courses for Anchorage Community College and the University of Alaska Anchorage. While there, she instructed students in English as a Second Language, linguistics, and composition; served as department chair for eight years; and supervised the Reading/Writing Center for five years.

Areas of Expertise:

Her areas of expertise include global Englishes, program evaluation, multicultural applications of electronic technologies, writing skills for decision-makers, and regulation compliance. Experience to help businesses proactively to avoid employment problems while facilitating their growth and prosperity.

University, Professional, Public Service

Katasse currently teaches as an adjunct for UAA and offers technical consulting and training through a business she established in 1976.

Professional Affiliations:

Katasse is a member of the American Association for Applied Linguistics, the Modern Language Association of America, the National Council of Teachers of English, and the Society for Technical Communication.

Scholarship/Creative Activity:

She has presented by invitation and published frequently in referred journals on topics related to language use. Katasse's favorite pastimes are rifle shooting, snowshoeing, berry-picking, reading with her granddaughter, and training golden retrievers for field trials.

Honors, Awards, Certificates, Licenses:

Synopsis for marketing flyers:

Constance C. Katasse retired as Professor of English in 2001, after almost 30 years of teaching undergraduate and graduate courses for Anchorage Community College and the University of Alaska Anchorage. While there, she instructed students in English as a Second Language, linguistics, and composition; served as department chair for eight years; and supervised the Reading/Writing Center for five years. Katasse currently teaches as an adjunct for UAA and offers technical consulting and training through a business she established in 1976. She earned a Ph.D. in Applied Linguistics (emphasis in adult language acquisition and translation theory) from The Union Institute, and has studied in Cuba, Greece, Mainland China, and the Russian Far East. Her areas of expertise include global Englishes, program evaluation, multicultural applications of electronic technologies, writing skills for decision-makers, and regulation compliance. Katasse is a member of the American Association for Applied Linguistics, the Modern Language Association of America, the National Council of Teachers of English, and the Society for Technical Communication. She had presented by invitation and published frequently in referred journals on topics related to language use. Katasse's favorite pastimes are rifle shooting, snowshoeing, berry-picking, reading with her granddaughter, and training golden retrievers for field trials.