Today, for the first time, over 50 percent of Alaska's graduating high school seniors are choosing to go college in Alaska. That's good news because those who are educated here, stay here. More than ever before, Alaska's best thinkers are staying home – preparing to make their mark right here in the state.

How do you measure momentum? How about a new 53,000-square-foot recreation center at UAS in Juneau? A 200,000-square-foot library on the UAA Anchorage campus or a major museum expansion at UAF Fairbanks? All signs of forward momentum that come with innovative program partnerships, expanded research, and strong public support.
