

Campus Profile: Northwest

The Northwest Campus (NWC) is a branch campus of the University of Alaska Fairbanks (UAF) and is part of UAF's College of Rural and Community Development. The Northwest Campus serves 15 Alaska Native villages in the surrounding 36,000 square miles, an area the size of the state of Indiana. NWC and its service villages are entirely off the road system requiring commercial airline or private charter for the majority of travel, even between villages. The nearest major airport is in Anchorage, 550 air miles from Nome. Travel to or from the surrounding villages requires an additional flight in and out of Nome via small commercial aircraft.
