History

Alaska was still a territory in 1915 when the United States Congress set aside federal lands near Fairbanks for a land-grant college. In 1917, Alaska's territorial legislature approved a bill establishing the Alaska Agricultural College and School of Mines, which opened in 1922. In 1935, the institution was renamed the University of Alaska.

The University of Alaska (UA) system, which covers an area one-fifth the size of the contiguous United States, is governed by an 11-member Board of Regents, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the legislature. The board reviews and approves educational policy, degree programs, campus development and budget requests. The board appoints the president, who is responsible for the administration of the system and serves as executive officer of the Board of Regents. The president's immediate staff consists of a vice president for university relations, a vice president for academic affairs, a vice president for administration, a chief information technology officer and a general counsel. The system office is located in Fairbanks.

There are three regional university centers in the UA system: UA Anchorage, UA Fairbanks and UA Southeast. A chancellor who reports to the president heads each university center. These three regional universities, along with the statewide administration, make up the four major administrative units (MAUs) of the UA system.

Mission Statement

The University of Alaska inspires learning, and advances and disseminates knowledge through teaching, research, and public service, emphasizing the North and its diverse peoples.

The University of Alaska Values

- Unity in promoting communication and collaboration.
- Accountability to our students, faculty, staff, alumni, and the diverse peoples of Alaska.
- Leadership for Alaska's people and institutions.
- Excellence for our programs and services.
- Accessibility for all Alaskans.
- Dedication to serving community needs.
- Stewardship of our resources.

UA Foundation

The mission of the University of Alaska Foundation is to seek, secure and steward philanthropic gifts to build excellence at the University of Alaska.

The University of Alaska Foundation is a private nonprofit corporation, operated as a public charity, which manages and invests donations for the exclusive benefit of the University of Alaska.

The Foundation is legally separate and distinct from the University of Alaska. The Foundation is governed by its own Board of Trustees. The Board of Regents of the University of Alaska has recognized the University of Alaska Foundation as the entity to manage private gifts made to support all campuses of the University of Alaska system.
